Postcard Captures Moment in Time in Talent

By Tiffany Dunn

In 1910, Fred Huber, a twenty-eight-year-old laborer, worked in our local orchards and resided with his wife, Elizabeth, and their 1-year-old son, Guile, in Talent. Fred was born in Melrose, Jackson, Wisconsin, to German parents on February 21, 1882. The Huber family lived in a rented house in town. They were fortunate as Fred had not experienced any unemployment that year. The household of three lived and worked in our burgeoning agricultural community. But by July 1911, our little family was back living in Melrose, Wisconsin. How do we know? By July 12, 2011, his mother wrote a short postcard to Fred from Talent.

The Talent Historical Society (THS) Museum recently acquired this postcard. On the front of the postcard is an image of the train depot in Talent, and on the other side is a short note from a mother to her son and his family. Not only is this postcard significant because it records the name of Fred Huber, whose short time in Talent was almost lost to time, but it also mentions a news-worthy event from Talent's history. Did you catch it? It appears that Fred's mother started writing her postcard on July 12, 1911 while it was postmarked on July 26, 1911. How do we know her whole postcard wasn't written on July 12th? She mentions, "We had a big fire last night. Pool hall and Buggess Hotel burned." The Ashland Tidings published the following on July 27, 1911, "The fire alarm was rung here about 1 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire was at Talent, where the Garvin & Thurber two-story building and the Talent Hotel, also a two-story structure, were burned. Both buildings were located in the very center of the business section and it was only by the strenuous efforts of a bucket brigade that the flames were kept from spreading to adjacent buildings. The fire loss is estimated at $6,500.

The fire broke out about 12:30 in the Garvin & Thurber building, known as the Old Valley Hotel. The blaze originated on the second floor, which is used as a dance hall. So far as known no one had been upstairs during the evening, which makes the origin of the blaze difficult to account for. The lower floor is used as a billiard and pool parlor, conducted by Garvin & Thurber. Players there had left the place only a short time before the discovery of the blaze. The heat from the burning building ignited the Talent Hotel at a distance of thirty yards. This is a residence property, owned by John Budgeon and conducted as a hotel. Most of the furniture of both properties was saved. The loss on the Garvin & Thurber building is placed at $5,000; on the Talent Hotel, $1,500. As soon as the fire was discovered a general alarm was sounded in the little town and a bucket brigade was formed. By hard work the barber shop of J.F. Norman, which was within the path of the flames, was saved. The business block across the street from the burning buildings threatened to burst into flames from the intense heat, but was saved through the application of water. Several windows in R. L. Burdic's general store were broken, but no further damage was done in this business block. When the alarm was sounded in Ashland several parties who have property in Talent drove to that town in automobiles, remaining until the fire was extinguished. It is the general belief that the fire must have been started by defective electric wiring."

Let's first turn our attention to the pool hall mentioned in the postcard. In the Ashland Tidings's article we learn that the pool hall was the old Valley Hotel and the lower floor was used as a billiard and pool parlor. This building is pictured to the above right (center of photo) and is mentioned in both the postcard and the newspaper article.

Fred's mother also wrote that the "Bugg[illegible] Hotel burned," while the Ashland Tidings reported that the Talent Hotel burned. In the 1910 United States Census we find, a John Budgeon was living in Talent, and his occupation was noted as "Hotel Ruler." In the 1911 Jackson County, Oregon, Directory, John Budgeon was listed as the proprietor of the Talent Hotel. In the 1912 directory, John was listed as a laborer with no mention of the hotel. It would seem that both the postcard and the newspaper article are referring to the same building. John Budgeon died on March 28, 1922 and is buried in Stearns Cemetery.

Please note this was not the same building as the Talent Hotel operated by J. H. and Emma Lacy in the 1920's on West Main Street.

Bob the I-5 Llama

By Willow McCloud

Bob the Llama in full effect

A version of this article was originally published in the Talent News and Review.

Let me introduce you to a fun little local icon that many of you probably have seen but might not know his story. His name is Bob. He is affectionately known as the I-5 Llama. Bob gained his name for obvious reasons after Bob Marley of course. Bob is a wild llama with no desire to be anyone's best friend, in fact so feral that no one has been able to get close enough to him to see if Bob could really be a Roberta. Bob and his mother showed up in the field behind Laurel Hill Golf course over 20 years ago around 2004. The mother and little llama just appeared one day; nobody came forth to claim the two. So it was there in the cattle field just south of exit 40 in Gold Hill / Central Point they would call their new home. Mama Llama died a few years later and Bob was left a solo llama in the field of cattle, a property that includes Laurel Hill Golf Course.

The golf course was built in 1977. It was the vision of and creation of Harvey Granger Russel's Granddad. With nine challenging holes of golf and a picturesque driving range, Laurel Hill was built from the love of family and love for the game and offers a challenging enough experience for experts and is short enough not to intimidate a beginner. The giant trees all around the course really give it that Oregon feel. I have always felt my best around tall pines. I love the feel of the little club shop and restaurant. This is also where you can go purchase Bob merchandise, meet 2 other treasures; Boots and Tater Tot, and kick up your feet in a rural setting and take it all in.

When the descendants, Angela and Russell took over the golf course in 2011, Bob had been there about seven years. By this time Bob's presence was popular among avid I-5 commuters, as he really sticks out as he grazes in the field or along the fence line. He was a llama that I just started checking in on every time I drove by without even knowing when the habit started, he was like a destination star to look for, I just called him the Lonely Llama or sometimes the Uno Llama but come to find out through reading Bob's Facebook page (yes Bob has his own Facebook page) many regulars over the years had named him. He/ She has many different identities to many different people.

Bob does not wish to be visited too close, he does not wish for treats, he does not want his hair cut, he prefers his southern Oregon Trusta / Rastafarian look, his hair is dreadlocks but again this is his own choice and not from any type of neglect. Bob might seem bored and lonely but he's actually working to pay his rent.

He is the guardian of the field and does his job well. He has been seen fighting and chasing other wildlife out of the field.

Some Llamas are great at guarding livestock against predators. Llamas are instinctively alert and aware of their surroundings. They have an obnoxious alarm sound that is much like a loud rusty hinge. They have no fear in running at the enemy kicking and spitting and can easily kill a coyote, but they are not an attack-animal just really good at guarding if that is how they are raised. In Bob's case he has been raised as a wild child and does this job very well.

When I was in the golf shop buying my Bob mug there was a gentleman there buying a mug as well, Gary from Williams. He said he drives by Bob every day to and from work and he has seen him chasing 3 bull elk out of the pasture, that was his Bob story. There are so many more stories like this and different Bob scenarios it really needs to be a short documentary film while we still have Bob to look forward to on our I-5 commutes. I suggested to Angela she should have a guest book and collect Bob stories, and I have a feeling this might be available soon. Because of Bob's overwhelming popularity and to relieve the stress of all the phone calls asking about Bob, if he is ok, or if he has not been seen for a couple days concern would grow fast, etc. So, the Grangers gave him his own face book page on August 30th, 2024. Word got out fast and today in just over 4 months he has 4.7 thousand friends. 172 in the last week. He is more on stage than ever now. I wonder if this old man gets the vibe he is not alone. It feels like the movie the Truman Show. In October, a passerby noticed Bob on the ground and instantly thought he was dead; she grieved and later wrote an obituary of sorts on the Jackson County Scanner page. Rio Gilinsky wrote. "This might be kind of a strange post to some, but I'm hoping this eventually finds the landowners of this lot (photo taken headed SB I-5 at MM40). I have been driving by this plot for years. Every time I pass, I look at your cattle "guarding" llama who never actually appears to be guarding anything but rather overlooking the freeway and contemplating life. Your llama has kept me entertained for years and I kid you not - he (or she) lives in my head rent free. I literally think about this llama several times a week even if I am not on the freeway. I obviously don't know you, or your llama. But I just wanted to say I'm sorry for the loss of this super cool animal. I was so sad to see him peacefully "resting" in his favorite spot last week. My trips to town will never be the same." * Later she updated her post with relief that Bob was alive, has a name and his own FB page.

Llamas typically live 15-25 years with some known to live 30 years or more. Llamas can form social relationships with humans through early positive interactions but in Bob's case he's just not that kind of guy. I had a very special moment with him when I took the attached picture. He was feeling curious. I told him he was super loved and never alone. His crooked little ear twitched and his big brown eyes were all mine for 2 minutes on a Thursday.

Next time you're on the freeway make sure to look for Bob, he's easy to spot. If you are feeling like an adventure or playing golf. This gem of a golf course will make you feel way farther away from Talent then you are, a nice little day get away and long distance visit with Bob.

Bob Day Past and Present

By Tiffany Dunn

Parade of Bobs

Have you heard? Bob Day is back! This festival originally put Talent on the map in the 1990s. On June 14, 2025 from 10:00am to 3:00pm you and your favorite Bobs are invited to our Bob Day reboot. The proceeds from this event will support the historic town hall restoration project in Talent. The activities will spill out of the THS Museum and into The Commons.

Let's backup to the origins of Talent's

Bob Day. Judie Bunch, a THS Museum volunteer worked as the manager of the Ashland Marketplace that was held behind the Plaza shops in the 1990s. She was reading a Chamber of Commerce newsletter that claimed 75 Bobs had recently attended a meeting and Judie was inspired. In August 1993, she hosted a trial run of Bob Day at the Marketplace to spice up a hot, sluggish sales day.

Judie kept thinking and talking to folks about Bobs. She reasoned, "Most Bobs are good guys who go about their days doing what needs doing without much notice. Bob Day would bring them all together to have fun and they'd be praised for being the fine fellows they are."

Judie called upon her friends, Chris DeSmit, Joyce Seely, and Sarah Spring and set about to fill Talent with Bobs on July 15, 1995. Local news outlets picked up on the enthusiasm. The Associated Press spread the word about Bob Day throughout Oregon, Washington and far beyond.

None of the original organizers had computers, email addresses, or social networking experience. They wrote letters, licked stamps, and used the telephone. They invited famous and everyday Bobs, Bobbys, Roberts, Robertas, Bobbies, Robins, (well, you get the idea) from around the country. One of CNN's top reporters, Bobbie Battista, reported to the world that she had been invited to Talent, but had to decline. Captain Kangaroo (portrayed by Bob Keishan) also kindly declined.

Bob Days included all sorts of general fun. There was a proclamation, a thingamabob contest, a short Parade of Bobs, a Bobby-Q, a BOB formation, and contests.

The Talent Historical Society Receives Grant Funds to Employ Local Artists for Monthly Educational History Presentations

by Debra Moon

For the second year in a row the Talent Historical Society (THS) has received grant funds from both Jackson County Cultural Coalition (JCCC) and Pacific Power Foundation (PPF) to pay performer fees to add music, drama, dance, and visual arts to monthly presentations on Talent's local history events, Night At The Museum, which are free to the public. THS is very grateful to these two funders for their generosity.

Last year, in 2024, some of the productions featured these topics and performers: History of the Wobblies (Workers of the World) in Southern Oregon; George Mann, singer and songwriter, performing union organizing songs of the early 1900's; a big event in September, a celebration of local heritage, with two bands, a dancing troupe, a display of historical photographs, and tours of the Talent Museum; a performance of songs about Hobos, Miners, and Cowboys; a talk about a collection of cabin replicas made by local resident, Jewel Lockard, and a viewing of 15 of the model cabins; a performance and cultural presentation by local dance troupe, Ballet Folklorico; and a Dia de los Muertos commemoration. The Old Time Fiddlers were going to present their history and perform their music in November, but it was postponed due to the "bomb cyclone" that hit the very day of their event.

These events made learning about local history more entertaining and fun for all. The addition of music, art, and drama drew larger crowds than usual and was a factor in THS's increase of membership from 165 at the beginning of the year to 214 at the last report in December.

This coming year, with the extended funds from JCCC and PPF, more special performances are in store. Here are some of the highlights for upcoming events. The Old Time Fiddlers will be rescheduled. A very special dramatization has been planned. THS Board Member, Debra Moon, has written a script for a "Radio Drama" about Talent history that will first be performed for an audience on the stage in the museum, then recorded and aired over local radio, KSKQ. Jan Wright, author of Oregon Outcast, has helped with the script, and Debra put quite a lot of research into it. Jeff Westergaard, a DJ at KSKQ, will produce the drama. Costumes and props have been purchased with the 2024 funds. The drama is the story of how the settlement of Talent began, and reveals the conflict between the native inhabitants and the settlers that beset them all at the start. A native drumming group will perform and also talk about their traditions with drumming. Another amazing and entertaining event will be the return of Bob Day, an event in Talent's history that was both unique and popular. The idea was to gather as many Bobs as possible (Roberts, Bobbys, Robertos, etc.) and celebrate these good guys who normally just go about their jobs in the community. It started smaller, but eventually, Bobs came from across the nation. THS is bringing the celebration of Bobs back to Talent.

So, there are many wonderful performances and events to look forward to again in 2025. This is a great way for the community to learn our local history. Watch for announcements of Night At The Museum events in the Talent News and Review, on the THS Facebook page, and on flyers around town.

Thank you so much JCCC and PPF for your support!!

Talent Art Walk Visits the Museum

On January 24, 2025 The THS Museum opened its doors to local artists and art lovers. This was the first of the year's quarterly Talent Art Walk events. It took place from 5:00pm to 7:00pm and the THS Museum was one of the official stops.

Folks brought their flashlights, lanterns, cell phone lights, or dressed in lights to illuminate their way through downtown Talent's numerous exhibits. The event brought together community members, local artists, business owners, and nonprofit organizations.

It was a great opportunity for folks interested in art to come in and see not only the artists and their presentations but also the historical exhibits. There were a few artists stationed at the Museum featuring chalk-like graphic work and photography.

Some of the other stops art lovers enjoyed included: Art Bop, Talent City Hall, Gather Café, Goldback and Iruai Wine Room, Project Space, Talent Beauty Spot, Talent Maker City, The Talent Gallery, and Trium Wines. The next Talent Art Walk is scheduled for April 25, 2025 at 5:00pm and we will have our doors open for art and history lovers.

Oregon Oldtime Fiddlers

On February 25, 2025 the Oregon Oldtime Fiddlers Association graced the THS Museum with lively music. We even moved some of the chairs out of the way so the dancing could commence. The performers came with the mission of preserving and celebrating oldtime music and sharing its history.

Oregon fiddle music is a mixture of many styles from many regions of the United States, Ireland, Scotland, and England. The instrumentalists play by ear and memory making every performance unique.

Between songs, they shared the colorful history and mythology of the lyrics; some of them dating from the beginning of the 18th century and earlier. The lead fiddler would signal the end of each song with a high kick which always resulted in a laugh from the audience.

Pioneer Stories by Carole Nielsen

Carole Nielsen, author of several historical books and numerous articles in Wild West Magazine, shared a lively presentation about Southern Oregon pioneers on March 26, 2025. Carole inherited her passion for Old West history from her parents. She has lived in Southern Oregon since 1947 excluding three years she lived in France.

She shared wonderful photos with the audience that beautifully illustrated her detailed pioneer stories. Carole and her husband have traveled to over forty countries and their wealth of shared experience was evident during the presentation.

Some of her books are now available to read in the library at the Museum.

Renewal of Life After Fire Bird Reports from the Greenway

by Emmalisa Whalley

Emmalisa Whalley, THS Board Member and volunteer Bear Creek Burn surveyor, is part of a team surveying the return of the birds to the Greenway after the Alameda Fire. She is an excellent photographer, providing us with amazing photographs of our birds and producing a bird calendar available for 2024 on the THS website, www.talenthistory.org. This article is a summary of recent observations, but if you are interested in the complete survey data, contact Klamath Bird Observatory, <https://klamathbird.org/>.

birds were European Starlings. We had Acorn Woodpeckers, Downy Woodpeckers and Northern Flickers in the trees surrounding us as we walked the path. There was also a singular Fox Sparrow, a Song Sparrow, a few White-Crowned Sparrows and many Golden-Crowned Sparrows on the ground foraging. A Belted Kingfisher made an appearance overlooking Bear Creek, watching for some food, those are always one of my favorites to find. There were also Mourning Doves, Eurasian Collared-Doves, a Ruby-Crowned Kinglet, California Scrub

Two recent surveys covered in this summary were from Mingus Pond in Central Point and Suncrest in Talent. Surveys are conducted within an hour of sunrise. Both were done with the starting temperature at 40 degrees and dense fog which limited visibility and the number of birds seen.

On the Mingus Pond survey, in December, we were enclosed in fog the whole time. The most numerous birds on this Survey were the large group of Canada Goose that were in both transects and a pure white domestic goose the group had adopted. There were plenty of Golden-Crowned Sparrows and a few European Starlings although the numbers were lower than in other Survey transects. There is a small pond in this section and there were Mallards and Geese that were utilizing this water. At the bigger pond there was a bit more variety with Wood Ducks, Green-Winged Teals, and a Wilson's Snipe. There was also a family of Long-Billed Dowitchers, six of them, that were working the edges of the pond looking for food. There was an American Kestrel who likes to use the freeway sign as a lookout spot and a Peregrine Falcon sitting high up in a tree overlooking everything. A Great Blue Heron was sitting on a branch up in one of the trees near Bear Creek. The highlight for me in this section was the Long-Billed Dowitchers and getting close enough to get a picture.

On the Suncrest survey in January we were in fog again. The most numerous

-Jay and a single Common Raven. The raptors we spotted was a group of four Red-Tailed Hawks and an American Kestrel. The highlight from this section was seeing a male Common Merganser on Bear Creek near a Mallard.

Altogether, on the December Mingus Pond trip 296 birds were sighted from 28 species.

The total of birds that were counted in the January Suncrest survey was 193 from 24 species.
